

Abstract

Phosphorescent electroluminescent elements

- 5 The present invention describes electroluminescent elements comprising cathode and anode and at least one emission layer, where this comprises at least one matrix material A comprising certain elements and at least one emitter layer B which emits light from the triplet state.